APPENDIX—B.

Note on the Hindu Calendar in its relation to Agricultural Operations.

The Hindu cultivator is entirely dependent on his *panchanga*ⁱ or calendar, as interpreted for him by the village astrologer or priest.

The Samvat year which is always used is a luni-solar year and in Central India commences with the new moon immediately preceding the Vernal equinox or the sun's entry (Sankrant) into Aries (Mesha) in the month of Baisakh (April). In Central India the *Purnamanta*ⁱⁱ month, i.e., from full moon to full moon, is in use, the month beginning with the 1st day of the Krishna paksha (or badi) or dark fortnight of the month, in which the moon is waning from full to new. The new year, therefore, by the purnamanta scheme falls in the middle of Chaitra that is in March or April.ⁱⁱⁱ

- (i) Lit. Five limbs or elements, viz., tithi (date), vara (week-day), Nakshatra (asterism), yoga (conjunction), and karana (the difference in time between the moon and the sun=half tithi).
 - (ii). In southern India and by Deccanis living in Central India the Amanta system reckoning from new moon to new moon is in vogue.
 - (iii). The year 1907 commenced on 16th March; 1908 on 3rd April; 1909 on 23rd March; 1910 on 11th April.

Agricultural operations, however, are rather regulated by the Nakshatras than by the ordinary months. The nakshatras or bha are a series of asterisms. They are often called the "lunar asterisms" or "lunar mansions", a misnomer derived partly from the misapprehension of their origin and partly from the cognate star groups used by the Arabs and termed by them "manazil-al-kamar" or mansions of the moon. The nakshatras are arbitrary groups of stars devised just as the European zodiacal constellations were to mark out divisions of the ecliptic, and which could be applied to all purposes for which such divisions are required in astronomical observations.

These constellations are reckoned sometimes as 27 and sometimes as 28, the lesser figure being now almost invariably employed. Investigation has shewn that 28 was the original number, the asterism Abhijit being simply left out when the division into 27 was adopted. The origin of the change is easily traceable. As soon as the Greek sexagesimal system of dividing into degrees and minutes was adopted by native astronomers 27 was the only feasible number, as it gave 27 nakshatras of exactly 800' each whereas 28 gave a fractional figure of $771 \frac{3}{7}$. A revolution of the whole circle of asterisms (bha-chakra) forms a sidereal day. The months are regarded as taking their names from the nakshatras in which the moon becomes full during their continuance. The Surya-siddhanta lays it down that the month is to be named after the asterism with which the moon is in conjunction (yoga) at the end of the parvan, a parvan here being half a Shukla-Paksha (light fortnight), so that the end of this parvan is equivalent to the end of the day of full moon or the moment of opposition in longitude. Owing, however, to the incommensurability of the times of revolution of the sun and moon and also to the revolutions of the moon's line of apsides, full moon may fall in all the asterisms in succession and at all points of the zodiac, so that, though at the time when this system was inaugurated the names may have been strictly applicable, they would not long remain so.

Instead, however, of altering the names of the months, which would have been highly inconvenient, a month is called Kartik in which the full moon falls in either the nakshatra of Krittika or Rohini; Chaitra when it falls in either Chitra or Swati and so on (see table A). By this means the 27 nakshatras are divided as equally as possible between the 12 months. There is little doubt that these asterisms were at first applied to the lunar months, no more suitable derivation for the names than that of the asterisms in which the moon reached perfection being conceivable. In later times the lunar months came to depend on the solar months for their names. The nakshatras were naturally brought into close connection with the moon and it appears that for a long time only the motions of the sun and moon were studied, those of the planets being neglected. In this way the nakshatras were specially connected with the moon's path although not used exclusively as lunar mansions, but as general divisions of the zodiac applicable to all purposes for which such divisions are useful and necessary.

(iv). It may be noted that the European division of the zodiac into 12 parts (called by them "rasi"), was adopted later on by Hindu astronomers, who borrowed both divisions and names from the Greeks.

The muhurta or auspicious moments for the commencement of agricultural operations depend on the conditions obtaining at the time under the different nakshatras. A full exposition of these conditions is not possible here. It may, however, be briefly stated that under varying conditions the nakshatras are favourable or unfavourable, certain or uncertain in their influences and are classed as sthira (stationary) or dhruva (firm), ugra (wrathful), mishra (neutral), and the like, the same nakshatras under different conditions falling in different categories. Though all authorities are not in accord in regard to details a few general instances may be cited. Corn may be trodden out under the Shravana, Magha, Jyeshtha, Rohini, Mula, Anuradha and Revati nakshatras. Sowing may be carried out under Vishakha, Purva-Bhadrapada, Mula, Rohini, and Shatabhisaj, but all Saturdays and Tuesdays should be avoided if possible. Corn may be gathered into a heap under any nakshatra except those which are mishra or ugra, or under Aslesha, Ardra or Jyestha.

The earth is supposed to sleep on 5th, 9th, 10th, 15th, 21st, and 24th days succeeding a Sankranti and on such days, therefore, no agricultural operations should be attempted. Similarly when the moon is in the signs of Mesha (Aries) Vrishabha (Taurus) and Mithuna (Gemini) she is supposed to sleep, and this is considered the most favourable time for digging wells.

The tables A and B below give (A) the relationship between the nakshatras and months, and (B) the various nakshatras with their yogata or leading star and its equivalent according to our nomenclature. The figure supposed to be represented, with the presiding deity and the sign of the zodiac corresponding to each are also given.

APPENDIX D

service of the Holkars*

Ambrose, R L. Major —An English Officer in Jaswant Rao's service. He wrote a pamphlet entitled "A letter on the present crisis of affairs in India, addressed to Eduard Parry, Chairman of the East India Company". In this work he gives much interesting information. He mentions Holkar's detestation of Frenchmen due to the way in which he had been deserted by Dudrenec and Plumet.

Armstrong, Major —Successor to Plumet in command to Holkar's 2nd Brigade of Infantry in 1802. He distinguished himself in the battle of Poona. In 1803 he contrived with great difficulty to escape by flight from the camp, as Holkar would not allow his officers to take advantage of Lord Wellesley's proclamation. He received a pension of Rs 1,200 a month from the British Government.

Loy, J. P. Colonel —An American, in 1792 he undertook to raise a battalion for Ahalya Bai, but whether he actually did so is not clear, though the contract between them is in the State archives. He is never mentioned as serving with the Holkar forces. In 1795 he was in the Nizam's service.

Dodd, Major —An Englishman who succeeded Gardiner in command of a Brigade, composed of 4 battalions of infantry, 200 cavalry and 20 guns. He was probably present at Poona. He was one of the officers executed by Holkar at Nahar Magra, in 1804, for refusing to fight against the British.

Dudrenec, Chevalier —A native of Brest and a gentleman of birth, education and refinement. His father was a commodore in the French navy. He came to India in 1773 on a man-of-war. In 1780 he went to Delhi and entered Madoc's corps there, afterwards serving the Rajas of Bharatpur and Gohad and Najaf Kuli Khan, Shah Alam's wazir. In 1783 he entered the service of Begam Somru, but resigned in 1791 to raise a force for Tukoji Rao Holkar and Ahilya Bai. He received Rs 3,000 a month for raising a Brigade of 4 battalions. In 1792 this force was annihilated at the battle of Lakheri, but Tukoji, impressed with its staunchness even when defeated, commissioned him to another. In 1793 the new force took part in the battle of Kardla, in association with Perron's force. They returned thence to Indore where they remained in peace until 1797 when Tukoji Rao died. The Brigade had then been raised to 6 battalions. In the dissensions which arose Dudrenec joined Kashi Rao, but was persuaded by Amir Khan to go over to Jaswant Rao¹. He was then given Rampura in jaedad for the support of his force. In 1800 he assisted Lakwa Dada in Jaipur, and was also with Perron at the battle of Malpura against Partab Singh of Jaipur (April 15th, 1800). His corps was charged by the Rathor contingent of 10,000 horse who had joined Partab Singh. Skinner who was present thus describes it:—

"We now saw the Chevalier Dudrenec's Brigade, which was on our left, charged by the Rhattores. He received them nobly, but was cut to pieces by them, out of 8,000 men he had not 200 left. The Rhattores, more than 10,000 in number, were seen approaching from a distance the tramp of their immense and compact body rising like thunder above the roar of battle. They came on, first at a slow hand gallop, which increased in speed as they approached. The well served guns of the Brigade showered grape upon this dense mass, mowing down hundreds at each discharge, but this had no effect in arresting their progress. On they came like a whirlwind, trampling over 1,500 of their own body destroyed by the cannon of the Brigade, and neither the murderous volleys from the muskets nor the serried hedge of bayonets could check or shake them. They poured like a torrent on and over the Brigade, and rode it fairly down, leaving scarce a vestige of it remaining as if they had met with but as light obstacle, they looked not even behind them at the fallen, but went on, unshaken and still in their formidable mass, to attack the cavalry of the second line. These ran like sheep while the Rhattores pursued them cutting them down for several miles. In this charge Captain Paish was killed and Dudrenec only escaped by throwing himself down amongst the dead".²

In August 1801 Dudrenec determined to leave Holkar and enter Sindhua's service, no doubt on Perron's invitation. His men, however, declined to desert and he escaped from Rampura with great difficulty being assisted by Zalim Singh of Kotah. In 1803 he obtained command of the 4th Brigade in Perron's force and surrendered to Colonel Vandeleur at Muttra on 30th September that year.

1. A long story is given in Amir Khan's life by Prinsep, P. 109

2. The Asiatic Annual Register for 1901 says he was imprisoned at Kotah for some time in 1800

Evans, Captain.—In Begam Somru's service originally and afterwards de Boigne's. He was with Tone at Seondha and must therefore have entered Holkar's service later on.

Gardner, William Linnaeus, Colonel.—Of all the military adventurers who served at native courts none had so romantic a history as Gardner. Born in 1770, he was grandson of William Gardner of Colleraine and nephew to Alan, first Baron Gardner, a distinguished Admiral. William Linnaeus was educated in France and came out to India in the King's service. He resigned as a Captain. In 1798 he entered Holkar's service, and raised a Brigade of Infantry. Soon after he quarrelled with his employer and only just escaped with his life; he thus describes the incident. "One evening, when in Holkar's service, I was employed as an envoy to the Company's forces, with instructions to return within a certain time. Suspicion of treachery was caused by my lengthened absence and accusations were brought against me at the darbar held by Holkar on the third day, following that on which my presence was expected. I rejoined the camp while the darbar was in progress. On my entrance, the Maharaja, in an angry tone demanded the reason of my delay, which I gave pointing out the impossibility of a speedier return. Whereupon Holkar exclaimed, in great anger, "Had you not returned this day I would have levelled the Khanats of your tent." I drew my sword instantly and endeavoured to cut His Highness down, but was prevented by those around him; and before they had recovered from the amazement and confusion caused by the attempt I rushed from the camp sprang upon my horse and was soon beyond the reach of recall.¹

The threat to cut down the Khanats referred to Gardner's wife who was a native princess of Cambay and parda nashin. His wife was afterwards adopted as a daughter by the Emperor Akbar Shah. They lived as man and wife in great happiness for over 40 years. She died of a broken heart in August 1835, six months after her husband. Gardner afterwards entered British service and in 1809 raised "Gardner's horse" now known as the 2nd Lancers.

In her "Wanderings of a pilgrim in search of the picturesque" Fanny Parkes has given a vivid account of Gardner, then an old man, of whom she was very fond.

Gardner had two sons and a daughter. His eldest son James married a niece of the Emperor Akbar Shah, his younger Alan married Bibi Sahiba Hinga and left two daughters, Suzanne and Karmuzi. The latter in 1836 married her own cousin William Gardner, nephew of the second was wounded, though himself suffering from three severe wounds, immediately hurried to the spot where Harding was lying. The wounded Officer was, however, dying and was only just able to express a wish to be buried in the Residency cemetery when he expired. His wish was scrupulously fulfilled.

Plumet, Major—Ferdinand Smith, the historian of the military adventures, calls him a Frenchman and a gentleman, two "qualities which were seldom united in the Mahratta Empire." He raised a body of men for Jaswant Rao in 1798, and was largely instrumental in winning the battle of Ujjain. He found Holkar "too cruel, cunning, capricious and ungrateful" and left his service. Ambrose says, he deserted on the eve of the battle of Indore and that this behaviour and Dudrenec's defection made Holkar brand all Frenchman as dugarbaz.

Ryan, Major—This unfortunate officer was among those executed by Holkar at Nahar Magia in 1804. He was an Irishman and commanded a battalion.

Tone, William Henry, Colonel—An Irishman and brother of the well-known Irish rebel Theobald Wolfe Tone. He was born in August 1764, his grandfather being a farmer near Naas in Kildare, and his father a clock-maker. Tone was apprenticed to a book-seller, but spent his time reading books of travel, and finally at 16 ran away and entered the Company's service as a volunteer. He served 6 years at St. Helena and then came home. Tone was a handsome well made man, with considerable natural powers especially in composing poetry. He was noted for his dashing bravery.

In 1792 he re-entered the Company's service, but left it for that of the Nizam. After various adventures he ultimately entered Holkar's army. He was present at the battle of Seondha and was taken prisoner. He was killed at Maheshwar in 1802 in a skirmish. He is well known for his pamphlet "Some institutions of the Mahratta people" and several letters which were highly praised by Grant Duff.

Vickers, Major—A half-caste, and most gallant soldier. He entered Perron's army in the 2nd Brigade under Pohlmann. When Dudrenec deserted Holkar, he obtained command of that officer's corps and behaved with great courage at the battle of Poona. In 1804 when war broke out between Holkar and the English he wished to take advantage of Lord Wellesley's proclamation. Holkar sent for him and told him he must fight against the English. Vickers declined positively as did Dodd and Ryan, two brother officers. On this Holkar had them all executed (in May 1804) on the Nahar Magra hill in Udaipur near which they were encamped.

APPENDIX—E.

Note on the State Coat of Arms prepared by the Chief Minister of the Holkar State some years ago, and already on record in Buckingham Palace archives in London:—

The State Coat of Arms consists as the design above shows of the Sun's disc under a Chhatra (royal umbrella) a bull (Nandia) a horse, a spear, a sword, and plants of wheat and poppy.

The disc of the Sun and the Chhatra are given in commemoration of the historical incident that occurred in case of the founder of the Family, Malhar Rao Subhadar. The story runs that the Subhadar while still young was sleeping in the jungle under the sun and a large cobra had held its hood over his head for warding off the great heat of the sun. The 2nd interpretation is that the Holkars consider themselves the descendants of Rajputs of the Udaipur House who belong to the Solar race and the sun being the emblem of the solar race is put here.

The (वज्र) Horse and the Sword are given in token of the Tutelary deity (Shri Martand of Jejuri) of Holkars. The horse is the favourite Vahan (वाहन) i.e., conveyance of the God Shri Martand and the sword is his favourite weapon. The Bull is the Vahan (वाहन) of the god Shiva who is especially adored by the Holkar Family. The spear is the main fighting weapon of the founder.

The plants of wheat and poppy represent the crops which are the chief sources of revenue to the State.

Motto: "Praho mesho labhya shri kartuh prarabdhat."

प्राह्मे मेसो लब्ध्या श्रीः कर्तुः प्रारब्धात्

The meaning of the motto is "Umesh (Shiva) said, wealth is obtained by doer's previous actions" which means that one should do good actions

before aspiring for prosperity The reason of adopting this motto is that the four letters marked in red constitute the word होलकर Holkar, and the beauty is that each of the 4 letters occurs at equal distance

The colour of the Banner is white and red The Banner of the same kind as was once carried by the Peshwa Army under its Chief Bande Sahib This is done because Maharaja Malhar Rao I had served long under the Banner of Bande Sahib and he preserved it in love and honour of his old Commander

Genealogical creed or Gotra of the family as such there is none But the Holkars have been thinking themselves as the descendants of the Rajputs of the House of Udaipur and assume the Vashishtha Gotra which is the Gotra of the solar race but in ordinary rituals the Gotra repeated by them is the Gotra (Vishnu Charan) The Shakha of the family is Vajasaniya or Madhyandina

Preceptor or Upadhyas is hereditary

The Holkars have Kshetropadhyayas in all the Kshetras

The Holkars are Hindu by Religion being Maratha Dhangars by caste and belong to the Shaiva Sect Their tutelary deity is Shri Martand or Khandoba of Jejuri and consorts Mhalsabai and Banabai The subsidiary deities are Janabai of Talkonkan, Dharampuri Bhawani, Tukai of Tuljapur, Yemai of Kavatha, Rajobai of Kavadi Dongar, Birobi Mhasoba of Dodi Dapuri, Bhairoba of Soneri, Gaya Deo of Talkokan, Satwai of Hol Murum, Udgeri Satwai of Wafgaon, Sitwai of Mankeshwar The first residence of Holkars is said to be Gokul Mathura, 2nd Chitor, 3rd Mungi Patthan, 4th Vir, 5th Hol, 6th Wafgaon, 7th Katrabad Mandagan, 8th Chandwar, 9th Maheshwar and 10th Indore

Annexure—A

[Accompaniment to the Residency letter No 6240, dated 8th September 1894]

Rules for reciprocal arrest and surrender of criminals who have committed an offence in one State and have taken refuge in another, sanctioned by the Durbar in letter No. 577 of 11th December 1889

1 Arrest—Perpetrators of offences named in schedule * annexed hereunto when pursued from one State to another immediately after the commission of an offence, and registered criminals (vide section 16), may be arrested by the pursuing party without the intervention of the local police of the State into which they have fled, provided at the time of the arrest the assistance of the local police cannot be obtained without risking the escape of the accused

2 In all other cases, where dacoits or criminals escape from one State to another, arrests should be made through the local police who are bound to give immediate attention to requisitions for assistance in arresting or searching for accused persons

3 Immediately after arrest, whether under section 1 or 2 the offenders should be made over to the local police of the State in which they are arrested, and the local official in command is bound to receive them and give a receipt for them

4 No houses should be searched except through the local police, and any stolen property found after the search should be made over to the local police who will give a receipt for it.

5 No arrest should be made as under section 2, or house searched as under section 4, except on the strength of a warrant previously obtained from a competent Magistrate of the pargana in which the offence was committed, or from his superior authorizing the arrest or the search to be made

6 Persons making arrests as under section 1, and officers issuing warrants as under section 5, shall not make arrests and issue warrants respectively without having sufficient cause to justify their action, and shall be held responsible for what they do

7 Extradition —When criminals are pursued and caught redhanded or when there is no doubt regarding the criminality of the persons accused, extradition should be mutually granted without delay or superfluous formalities. In other cases on receipt from the State in which the offence was committed of sufficient prima facie evidence of the guilt of the persons arrested, they should be made over to that State direct without the intervention of the Agency

8 But when any dispute arises regarding any point connected with the extradition, a reference should immediately be made to the Agency

9 The prima facie evidence referred to in section 7 should be furnished as soon as possible after arrest, and should not be delayed more than one month, except under special circumstances which should be explained to the State in which the accused have been arrested, and, if necessary, reported to the Political Agent

10 If sufficient prima facie evidence referred to in sections 7 and 9 is not furnished within one month after the date of the arrest of the offenders and the State in which the arrest took place is not satisfied with the explanation of the cause of delay, the said State shall report the facts to the Political Agent, and on obtaining the Political Agent's sanction shall release the accused

11 The offences which shall be recognized as ordinarily justifying a demand for surrender are named in the accompanying schedule *

12 The trial should be completed as soon as possible. Complaints of delay or of irregularities in procedure or representations of any other matter connected with the trial which cannot be mutually settled should be submitted to the Political Agent for orders

13 When witnesses residing in one State are required by another State to give evidence in a criminal case, they should be sent at once

14 Immediately after trial, copy of judgment should be given to the prisoner, and intimation of the result of the trial should be at once conveyed to the State

15. Monthly statements of requisition for surrender and of surrenders and trials should be submitted to the Agency in the accompanying form.

16. Persons who have committed offences named in schedule * and whose arrest is required should be registered as soon as sufficient prima facie evidence of their guilt has been obtained, and a copy of this register should be circulated to all the States where there is any likelihood of the accused taking refuge.

10 A copy of the report drawn up under rule 7 shall be submitted by the Magistrate concerned to the District Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

11 On receipt of the above report, the District Magistrate will forward a copy of it to the Legal Remembrancer endorsing thereon the action taken by him if the accused is arrested or the seizure is made at the instance of officer of an Indian State in Central India. If the accused is arrested or the seizure is made at the instance of an officer of any other State or territory the District Magistrate shall forward a copy of the report to the Legal Remembrancer for necessary action without taking any action himself.

12 On receipt of the prima facie evidence from any State in Central India, demanding extradition, the District Magistrate may order the accused together with the property seized, if any, to be handed over to the demanding State provided the offence charged is an Extradition offence and he is satisfied of the existence of a prima facie case against him. 18. When the arrest has been effected in British India or an Indian State outside Central India, the prima facie evidence supporting the demand for extradition shall be submitted by the District Magistrate to the Legal Remembrancer along with a copy of the report under the preceding rule and the Legal Remembrancer will take further necessary action to secure extradition of the offenders and properties in such cases according to existing rules or arrangements.

19. When the arrest has been effected in an Indian State in Central India, the District Magistrate shall himself apply with the least possible delay to the District Magistrate having jurisdiction at the place of arrest for the surrender of the accused and property, if any, and such application will be supported by prima facie evidence to establish the offence

20. If no reply is received within a month from the date of the application or an unfavourable reply is received before the expiration of that period, a copy of the prima facie evidence, together with any further evidence obtained in the meanwhile should be submitted by the District Magistrate to the Legal Remembrancer with a report to the effect that no reply has been received or with a copy of the reply refusing extradition together with his opinion as to the sufficiency of the evidence. 21. If on perusal of the prima facie evidence, the Legal Remembrancer considers that it is sufficient to support the demand, he will move the authorities concerned for reconsideration and press for the surrender of the accused and property, if any, otherwise he will order the demand to be dropped with the previous approval of the Minister.

22. In case a dispute arises in a case pertaining to another Indian State which cannot be settled otherwise, the matter may be referred to the Political authorities and the case decided in accordance with the ruling given by them

MISCELLANEOUS

23. The foregoing rules will also apply 'mutatis mutandis' to a case where no accused person is involved and the proceedings relate to property alone

24. Nothing in these rules shall derogate from the provisions of any agreement or reciprocal arrangement for the extradition of offenders and the procedure provided by any such agreement or arrangement shall be followed in any case to which it applies and the provisions mentioned above shall be modified accordingly.

25. If the Minister is of opinion that any case raises an important question of law, he may make an order referring such question of law to the High Court and no order shall be passed in the Extradition proceedings until such question has been decided.

26. The Government may at any time stay any proceedings taken under these rules, and may direct any person to be discharged or pass such other order as it deems fit.

27. (1) The Government may make bye-rules to carry out the purposes of these rules.
